

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ)

Can I access a list of participants?

Contact information for participants is available to registered participants through the official World Water Week App. A list of participants and their contact information is not available. A list of participating organizations and a list of convening organisations will be available soon.

Can I access the list of media attending?

Contact information for registered media is only available to registered participants through the official World Water Week App.

How many/what media is attending WWW?

There are usually about 80-100 journalist attending World Water Week on-site and many more covering from a distance. Outlets may include AP, AFP, BBC, CNN, Al Jazeera, ARD, SVT, Bloomberg, The Guardian, Thomson Reuters, Xinhua, National Geographic, with strong geographical coverage.

Can you promote our report, book or press release?

Certain services are included for event convenors, for instance dissemination of press releases. If you are not a convenor, you may leave a handful of copies in the press room. As we are aspiring to a paperless conference, please limit the number of copies and/or focus on directing people to your resources online. Alternatively, you may wish to book a press briefing (costs apply). Contact coms@siwi.org for more information.

I would like to exhibit photos or a preview a film at World Water Week. Is this possible?

Unfortunately, this is not possible this year.

How do I apply for a press accreditation?

Apply for press accreditation here: <https://bit.ly/2Hrxm4H>.
View accreditation guidelines

Funding support for journalists or media?

The SIWI Journalist Grant process has closed for 2018. We publish as much as possible in our online press room and we can also assist with phone or Skype interviews. We encourage you to follow us on social media to get updates on events.

Media partnerships

If you are a media organization interesting in partnering with the Week, please contact press@siwi.org to discuss opportunities.

Community partnerships

Are you an advocacy organization or network with a significant reach? Would like to increase your communities knowledge of water-related issues? Please send some your request, with information about your networks and reach to coms@siwi.org for consideration.

Advertising

Limited advertising opportunities are available in the form of sponsored posts on the official event app. Email coms@siwi.org for more information.

For further information, visit: <http://www.worldwaterweek.org/about/#FAQ>